Major reshuffle at Zurich law firm

There is a change in the top management position at the Lalive law firm, which specializes in arbitration and litigation. Other personnel changes will also take place at the turn of the year.

Tom Brown takes over the position of Managing Partner at Lalive from Domitille Baizeau, who has held the position of CEO since 2020.

Brown joined the partnership at the beginning of the year, according to a statement from the firm on Thursday. He brings 20 years of experience as a partner in the project and finance industry and was Managing Partner at Allen & Overy Asia Pacific for eight years.

Brown will be supported by André Brunschweiler , who has been appointed Deputy Managing Partner. He previously served as Co-Chair of the Litigation Group in Zurich for four years. This position will be filled by Dominik Elmiger , who will work with Nicolas Ollivier in Geneva.

Baizeau takes over the position of Co-Chair of the Arbitration Group. She will work with Melissa Magliana and replace Joachim Knoll , who will be thanked for his "significant role" in the group over the past four years.

In addition to Zurich and Geneva, the firm also has an office in London.
